
Describe a language you want to learn (not English)

You should say:

What it is

How you would learn it

Where you would learn it

And why you want to learn the language

I want to learn how to speak Japanese.

There is a mobile application that gives different language lessons for free. Japanese is one of the offered courses. I can start learning the language through that application. When I get a good grip on the basics, I can ask my aunt to teach me at an intermediate level. She teaches Japanese to college students in the same university I attend.

I can use the mobile application at home or wherever I can connect to the internet. If I start working with my aunt, maybe I'll have to go to her house for lessons or enroll in one of her classes.

Maybe it sounds childish, but I want to try watching anime without subtitles. One of my main reasons though is that I want to visit Japan. It would be very convenient to travel without worrying about a language barrier. What's more, I'm a big fan of Japanese music. So, learning the language would help me understand the music better.

What can people do to learn a second language?

In my opinion, books are a good place to start learning a second language. I'm sure that my local library has plenty of books that I could borrow to learn the basics. Then, when I'm ready for the next step I would seek help from a teacher.

Is it popular to learn English in your country?

In my country, English is one of the compulsory courses so it's essential to master it. People who is not good at English may struggle to go to a good college. I experienced firsthand that mastering English is a plus.

其他观点

Despite being one of the required courses, I know some people who are disgruntled at the thought of learning English. I believe it can feel daunting to learn a new language, so even if English is popular, they resist. In my opinion, it's worth making the effort.

What are the difficulties of learning a new language?

In my opinion, the main difficulty of learning a new language is when it uses an alphabet that's completely different. For instance, I once tried to learn Russian and I gave up after a while because the letters were too complicated to me. I believe it's a hurdle.

其他观点

It seems to me that the main difficulty of learning a new language is consistency with practice. For example, even if I spent three hours studying today, if I don't practice a bit every day, I will forget what I learned. It requires discipline.

What's the best way to learn a new language?

My belief is that learning a new language is best achieved by immersion into that language. For example, I remember my fellow students in high school were quite fluent in English when they came back from exchange programs in America.
