

Why do people in cities like public gardens?

For people who live in cities, what they see most is the concrete buildings and busy traffic. So, it's good to visit gardens for a change. Gardens allow city people to get back to nature and let off steam. So, they like gardens.

What do you think are the benefits of having gardens in the city?

Well, gardens can add more greenery to the cities and make cities more beautiful. It can also freshen up the air and reduce traffic noise. Of course, gardens offer citizens a place to relax and hang out.

Do you think there are enough public gardens or parks in your hometown?

In my hometown, which is a small town, there are not enough parks. There is just one big park near the town center. So, people living in the suburbs have to walk quite far to get there.

Are there many public gardens in China?

Yes, there are. There is usually a park within walking distance from all the communities in the cities. When you are on a bus, you may come across several parks along the route.
