
Describe a good law in your countryWhat it is*How you knew it*Who it affects*Why you think it is good

The law in the country I live states that citizens must pay tax.

I knew of it when I was making purchases in my teenage years. And I often heard my parents talking about how much tax they had to pay each month when I was little.

The law affects everyone that lives in the country. For those who run businesses, big or small, they will be taxed according to their monthly and yearly revenue. Individuals who receive money from work also need to tax to the government. Even those who win lottery tickets need to pay a certain amount of tax.

I think it is good because these funds go into providing better roads, better health care services and other services to help the growing population. Without this law, there is no way for poor people to receive medical and educational support from the government. Likely, the police would not exist to maintain social order. Consequently, crimes and other social problems would begin to explode.

Do you think both men and women can be police officers?

I think both men and women can be police officers. Both genders have their strength and capabilities, and both can add skills to form strong teams.

其他观点

I don't think both men and women can be police officers. I think that men naturally have the strength and stamina that some women may not possess, so they can make good police officers. Women are usually quite sentimental, which is not helpful when carrying out police duties.

Do you think police officers are paid too much?

I think it depends on their performances. Some police officers are very skilled and professional, so their work can justify the good pay. But some other police officers are not competent, and they don't deserve the high salary.

其他观点

I think police officers do get paid too much. I think there are a lot of more noble professions around the world that deserve more credit for example-pilots, bus drivers and surgeons. I think these roles are riskier and are also humble.

What kind of people can become police officers?

Anyone can become a police officer, provided that you have the correct training and qualifications. It can also be anyone of any particular background or nationality.

其他观点

It takes specially skilled individuals to become police officers. Some people don't have natural skills that are needed, for example, confidence. So when they face dangerous criminals, they may find it hard to shoot at them or fight with them.

Do all Chinese people obey the law?

No, not all Chinese people obey the law. This causes some problem for the society, but these people will be punished for their behaviors. And the majority of the population abide the law.

其他观点

Yes, most Chinese people do obey the law. They see the value in listening to authority and give as much respect as is needed. They understand that this is a requirement especially as a citizen of the country.

Is kindness the most important quality of a police officer?

Yes. It is important that this quality is shown because it means that offenders and those who break the law understand that a measure of goodness will be shown to them which can potentially soften their character and help them to be better people.

其他观点

No, I think the most important quality is love. Love is what moves people to evoke other qualities. This love is a love of people-if police officers had a love of people, they would be less likely to judge people's actions and will be more likely to see how they can best help them.
