
Describe a teenager you know

You should say:

Who this teenager is

How you know this teenager

What this teenager likes to do

And how you feel about this teenager

I know a teenager named Dina.

I got to know her because she studies at the same schools as I do. Sometimes, during my lunch break, I see her eating with her friends. Other times, I see her when I'm walking down the hallway. I got to know her personally during the school's sports festival. She was on my team and we both played volleyball.

Dina is a very outgoing girl. Like many teenagers, she likes to spend time with her friends at the cafeteria or play volleyball with them at the school gym. Some time ago, she told me that that she enjoys watching cheesy romantic comedies. Dina said that she likes how they make her both laugh and sometimes cry.

She's a very energetic person. She's very friendly to everyone. I think that she could make a good officer in a student organization. I say this because she's very smart and persuasive, though she can be a bit too talkative.

What's the difference between teenagers and children?

From my point of view, the biggest difference between teenagers and children is their mood. I remember that as a child, I was full of energy and happiness. But as a teenager, I became kind of jaded. I was disinterested with everything.

In my opinion, a major difference between children and teenagers is their relationship with their parents. When I was a kid, I was very happy to be doing activities with my parents. However, as a teenager I wanted to look grownup and felt ashamed to be with them.

What are the difference between teenagers and old people?

I believe one difference between teenagers and senior is their outlook on life. As a teenager, I felt a lot of pressure to make important life decisions. However, seniors know that if they make the wrong decision, it's not the end of the world.

I don't believe they're different, except for age. For instance, both tend to be a bit self-centered and focus on what's wrong in their life. Some elders I know remain the same as teenagers in that regard, since their life always seems to be full of dramas.

How do teenagers treat old people in your country?

In my country, I believe that teenagers don't care much about the elderly. For instance, growing up I never did anything special with my grandparents, and only saw them once or twice a year. So, I think teenagers in general don't mind old people much.

It seems to me that more actions are being taken lately to bond teenagers with old people. For example, a friend of mine organizes activities where she takes high school students to retirement homes. I believe it's a great way to bridge the generation gap.

Do you think teenagers today are better than those 30 years ago?

From my point of view, teenagers will always be teenagers, no matter the era. I believe there will always be teenagers that do good and others that cause mischief. For this reason, I think it's a mistake to condemn a generation in particular.

其他观点

I don't believe teenagers today are better than their predecessors. On the contrary, based on my observation, they're not that resourceful. I believe school is partly to blame, for example, home economics class is no longer taught.
